

Preventive Care & the Marketplace: What's Covered?

Most health plans, including Marketplace plans, must cover a set of preventive services, like shots and screening tests, at no cost to you. This is true even if you haven't met your yearly deductible.

Preventive services prevent or detect illness at an early stage, when treatment is likely to work best. But these services are free only when delivered by a doctor or other provider in your plan's network.

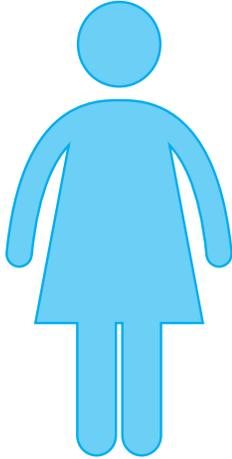

Here are some common services:

Adults

- Blood pressure screenings
- Cholesterol screenings: Certain ages + those at high risk
- Depression screenings
- Immunization vaccines
- Obesity screenings and counseling

Women

- Breast cancer mammography screenings
- Cervical cancer screenings
- Domestic, interpersonal violence screenings and counseling
- Tobacco use screenings and interventions
- Well-woman visits

Pregnant or may become pregnant

- Anemia screenings
- Breastfeeding support and counseling, and access to supplies
- Folic acid supplements
- Gestational diabetes screenings: At 24–28 weeks + those at high risk
- Hepatitis B screenings
